The Continuing Story in the Ibu Chronicles - Life is Funnier than Fiction series. The Measurement of Wealth is part 2 of the prequel. This book continues the story where The Epiphany left off. In this book, the writer shares her memoir from 2008 until 2015, managing and running a tour company in Bali, Indonesia, a culture so removed from her own, on an Island where Gods and Demons are intertwined with the people's daily lives. Rachel and her husband knew that conducting business in Bali as Westerners they would be faced with some major challenges, however, Rachel soon realised she needed to deal with her own demons first. This book is an enthralling account of her regrets, and how she realised her initial good intentions were not always for the good of the people, on an Island she quickly called home. The book is also a great insight into some of Bali's challenges and how the writer adapted to the local daily life. Follow the writer's honest account of making mistakes, her constant frustrations, her realisation that tourism in Bali was becoming a problem, and that she was part of that problem. In these compelling, poignant, and sometimes humorous stories, Rachel shares how she discovered the measurement of wealth from a Balinese village of simple farmers. This is the story of how learning these lessons helped her eventually accept that Life is Funnier than Fiction, especially in Bali. Did you know that American icon 7-Eleven is controlled by Japanese retail giant Ito-Yokado, Miller Beer is brewed by South African Brewer SABMiller, and that the Los Angeles Dodgers are owned by The News Corporation, an Australian company?. Thanks to their unique properties, chitosan and chitosan-based materials have numerous applications in the field of biomedicine, especially in drug delivery. This book examines biomedical applications of functional chitosan, exploring the various functions and applications in the development of chitosan-based biomaterials. It also describes the chemical structure of chitosan and discusses the relationship between their structure and functions, providing a theoretical basis for the design of biomaterials. Lastly, it reviews chemically modified and composite materials of chitin and chitosan derivatives for biomedical applications, such as tissue engineering, nanomedicine, drug delivery, and gene delivery. More than enough, for sure. His laptop may be three years old but it's still better than a typewriter, though he sometimes wish he still had one of those family heirloom, that clunky yet sturdy, made-in-America—the land of the free but indebted—writing machine. He loves the steady clicks of it as he types as if validating his every word, every dictum, every idea he churns out. Then it speaks in silence when he's done, yet is eagerly awaiting for the next set of ideas, which he would create in partnership with those keys. A typewriter does not spot a typo, does not suggest synonyms, would not do cut and paste, could not even tolerate more than a couple of errors, yes, but it does not need to be plugged in to that power outlet on the wall either! A laptop, on the other hand, does not mind how many errors you make. It may even be that it actually prefers that you make those errors just to show off that it has become more intelligent than you presently are or ever will be. In the not-so-distant future, he's afraid that this typewriter-killer would do all the thinking for him. He's got it all mixed up whether it's a good thing? But how could that be a darn good thing, thinking nothing when it is his all, his everything, all that he's ever been good at? BLACK ENTERPRISE is the ultimate source for wealth creation for African American professionals, entrepreneurs and corporate executives.
